IWLCA Announces Academic Honor Roll
410 student-athletes recognized for work in classroom

The Intercollegiate Women's Lacrosse Coaches' Association (IWLCA) has recognized 410 student-athletes for achieving success in the classroom with the naming of the 2007 Academic Honor Roll. Students from 157 institutions were honored, including members of all three national championship squads.

In Division III, 187 women from 76 schools were honored, including 2007 IWLCA Scholar-Athlete of the Year Megan Barbieri from Greensboro College. Amherst College, one of the Merit Squads for 2007, claimed seven honorees as did the University of Rochester, while Williams College, Washington and Lee University, and Neumann College all had six student-athletes on the list. Sixteen women who also earned All-America honors are members of the Academic Honor Roll, including the 2007 Midfielder of the Year, Kim Walker from Middlebury.

In Division II, 66 student-athletes from 24 different institutions were named to the Honor Roll, including eight who were also All-Americans. National Champion and Merit Squad designee C. W. Post had six honorees, including 2007 Scholar-Athlete and National Defender of the Year Lindsay Goldman. IUP and St. Thomas Aquinas also both had six women named to the list.

In Division I, 157 women from 57 schools were honored, including 2007 IWLCA Scholar-Athlete of the Year Lindsay Pieper from Virginia Tech. Three schools claimed six recipients, including national champion Northwestern along with Albany and Sacred Heart. Seven of the honorees also earned All-America honors, including Goalie of the Year Sarah Waxman from Penn.
