2007 SEASON REVIEW

2007 SEASON REVIEW

by Will Matthews

In what was in so many ways a storybook of a season for the 2007 Vanderbilt baseball team, rising junior shortstop Ryan Flaherty provided a classic dose of foreshadowing during a February game against Boston College.

In the finale of the annual Music City Classic, Flaherty walloped a ringing two-out, two-run, walk-off home run down the left field line in the bottom of the ninth inning to give the Commodores a 7-6 victory in a game in which they had never led.

"The thing is, Flaherty called his shot," Vanderbilt Head Baseball Coach Tim Corbin said in his office several hours after that game. "He told the trainer in the dugout, 'You ready to win the game?' And he steps up there and wins the game. This team always thinks they are going to win the game. We were down 5-1 and they certainly weren't thinking we were going to lose."

It was a mantra that would come to define the 2007 Commodores.

Vanderbilt's victory on that cold and misty February afternoon was their 10th straight to open what is widely considered to be the most successful campaign in the history of the program. The Commodores, who sat atop most of the major national polls for large chunks of the regular season, would go on to win a school-record 54 games, become the first team in more than a decade to win both the Southeastern Conference regular season and tournament championships in the same year, and host an NCAA regional for the first time in school history.

But even more than all the victories and championships that Vanderbilt racked up in 2007, it was the way they won that distinguished the club more than anything else – a distinction epitomized – and perhaps birthed – by Flaherty's game winning homer against Boston College which allowed Vanderbilt to snatch victory out of the jaws of defeat.

The Commodores came from behind in an astonishing 31 of their 54 victories, including the game that was perhaps the most magical of them all – a 7-6, 10-inning win last May over Mississippi at the SEC Tournament in Hoover, Ala. in which Vanderbilt vaulted into the tournament's championship by rallying from a three-run 10th inning deficit in a game that will live in Vanderbilt lore for years to come.

Ironically, it was a late-inning rally that didn't materialize which ultimately spelled doom for Vanderbilt in 2007: when a potential game-tying homerun by rising junior third baseman Pedro Alvarez was snatched by Michigan left-fielder Derek VanBuskirk as it sailed over the left field wall, the No. 1-ranked Commodores were well on their way to being ousted from the Nashville Regional and having their dreams of a trip to the College World Series shattered.

But in a year in which Vanderbilt established itself as one of the elite programs in all of college baseball, it is the team's remarkable run of successes that will cause it to be remembered.

Vanderbilt won its first 20 games of the season, won 22 out of its 30 SEC Conference games, won the regular season conference championship by a whopping five games and became just the third team in SEC history to win the SEC Tournament after losing its opening game. Vanderbilt was the first-ever team to win five straight conference tournament games.

The Commodore season included a three-game home sweep of rival Tennessee, and home sweeps of traditional SEC powers Florida and LSU – series in which Vanderbilt set all-time attendance records at Hawkins Field, paving the way for additional permanent seating to be constructed and making Hawkins a new destination point in Nashville's sports landscape.

And by virtue of entering the postseason as the nation's top-ranked team, it was awarded the No. 1 overall seed in the NCAA Tournament and the right to host an NCAA regional for the first time in school history.

Junior left-hander David Price dominated the Southeastern Conference in a way rarely seen: he didn't lose a single regular season decision on his way to compiling an 11-1 overall record with a 2.63 ERA with 194 strikeouts against just 31 walks in only 133.1 innings pitched. He won the Golden Spikes Award as the best player in amateur baseball, the Dick Howser and Brooks Wallace awards as college baseball's player of the year and the Roger Clemens Award as the best pitcher in college baseball.

He was also chosen by the Tampa Bay Devil Rays as the No. 1 overall pick in the Major League Baseball Draft.

Senior Closer Casey Weathers – the No. 8 overall pick in the Major League baseball draft by the Colorado Rockies – was just as dominant. He led the team in wins with 12, racked up seven saves and struck out 75 while walking just 21 in 49.1 innings pitched.

Price, Weathers and Alvarez were all named first team All-Americans by Collegiate Baseball and the National Collegiate Baseball Writers Association and rising senior right fielder Dominic de la Osa was a second team selection.

"It was a heck of a year with one of the greatest groups of guys I've ever been around," Corbin said. "It's something I'll always remember."
