In the span of 12 months, James Franklin has changed the culture of Commodore Football, raising expectations among followers that a Brand New Vanderbilt has arrived in Nashville.

Franklin’s enthusiasm, passion and drive have left a strong statement that Vanderbilt Football is headed for lots of success in the future.

Named as the team’s 27th head coach in team history last December, Franklin became the first new Commodore coach to guide his initial team into postseason play. His 6-6 Vanderbilt squad will face the 9-3 Cincinnati Bearcats in the 53rd AutoZone Liberty Bowl.

The Commodores are vastly improved under Franklin. Statistically, the Vanderbilt offense and defense rank as the most improved in the powerful Southeastern Conference. The offense tallied more points than any Vanderbilt unit in 50 years. The improvement on defense has been even more pronounced, as it ranks among the nation’s Top 20 in total defense.

They also are an exciting team to watch, offering an array of trick plays to the delight of fans.

Upon arriving on campus, Franklin promised to reverse the football fortunes on West End. He immediately began changing expectations among players and support staff, inspiring a championship mentality within the entire Vanderbilt Football community.

Around campus and in Nashville, Franklin enthusiastically promoted his squad. Franklin draws attention to the Vanderbilt program in various ways, whether speaking before civic groups or producing must-see YouTube videos for public consumption. He also provides rare insider experience, such as allowing remarkable fifth-grader Andrew Kittrell to lead the Commodores onto the field against Connecticut.

Franklin’s impact was immediate. The offseason conditioning program guided by Dwight Galt, a former Franklin associate at Maryland, was a huge success in building as much team chemistry as it did individual strength. Franklin’s positive message grew interest in the team’s spring practices, and helped attract the largest crowd in years to the team’s Black & Gold Spring Game.

While the Commodores opened the season with a convincing 45-14 victory over outmanned Elon, a series of events late in the Connecticut game brought the Commodores even closer together. Seeing a lack of energy with his team trailing 21-14 in the fourth quarter, an emotional Franklin rallied his squad, telling all that this Vanderbilt football team was different from the others. Within minutes, cornerback Casey Hayward returned an interception 50 yards for a touchdown, and Carey Spear capped the comeback with a 31-yard field goal to give the program its first big win in two full seasons.

Franklin’s reaction after a bitter 33-28 midseason defeat to SEC East rival Georgia drew more admiration from Commodore fans.

“We’re going to compete with class,” Franklin said at the post-game press conference. “But we are not going to sit back and take stuff from anybody. Those days are long gone and never coming back. Ever!”

The Commodores seemed to take momentum from the Georgia disappointment. They had a chance to win all six games afterward, and outscored those opponents 193-117. Vanderbilt defeated Kentucky 38-8, the widest margin over an SEC team in 40 years, and thrashed Wake Forest 41-7 on the road to claim bowl eligibility. The Commodores’ three late-losses in conference play came by a total of 14 points.
Franklin’s first Vanderbilt team notched four more victories than the 2009 and 2010 Commodore teams. They recorded five home wins, the most by a Commodore squad since the mid-1990s. They also outscored their opponents by 73 points, a remarkable 244-point improvement over the previous year. The point differential by the Commodores is the largest since 1974.

Several Vanderbilt players enjoyed tremendous seasons during Franklin’s first year on campus. Stacy put together the finest rushing season in Commodore history, setting a team single-season record of 1,136 yards. He also rushed for 13 touchdowns, the highest total in modern-day team history.

Rodgers passed for 1,498 yards – the most ever by a first-year Vanderbilt quarterback – and tossed nine touchdowns, including at least one in the last six games. Sophomore Jordan Matthews blossomed as Rodgers’ top target, averaging 121 receiving yards during the final five games. Another young receiver, Chris Boyd, topped all SEC freshmen with seven touchdown catches.

The offensive line jelled despite a rash of injuries. Three linemen – Wesley Johnson, Ryan Seymour and Kyle Fischer – earned weekly honors from the SEC.

On defense, Hayward, linebacker Chris Marve and defensive end Tim Fugger earned All-conference recognition.

The unit made tremendous strides over the previous year, jumping from 93rd in the nation to 19th in total defense by averaging nearly 94.6 less yards per game. They also owned the line of scrimmage, limiting opponents to just 123 rushing yards. The defense also earned a reputation for scoring points off turnovers, returning a school-record four interceptions for touchdowns.

After the team’s victory at Wake Forest, Vanderbilt’s administration committed to Franklin on a long-term basis, extending his contract with a pay raise and promising a series of program upgrades, including adding an indoor practice facility, new jumbotron and meeting rooms.

FRANKLIN INTRODUCED IN NASHVILLE ★ Dec. 17, 2010

Fueled by a strong finish to recruiting, Franklin lands 21 signees coming from 13 states. The class, which includes a pair of 4-star prospects, is regarded as Vanderbilt’s most talented class in years.

FRANKLIN TO AUDIENCE OF FANS: “Basically, this staff was not going to take ‘no’ for an answer. We told every recruit that. We would go into their homes and tell them reasons they should come and tell their family. In the end, we would look them in the eye and tell them we weren’t taking ‘no’ for an answer and they were coming to Vanderbilt.”

FRANKLIN STAGES STUDENT TRYOUTS ★ Feb. 15, 2011

After visiting dorms and fraternity row, Franklin personally conducts tryouts for the Vanderbilt student body to make the team’s spring roster. Seventeen students participated in the tryouts. Eventually, six students would join the team for spring drills.

In addition to coordinating the Commodore offense, Donovan has mentored Zac Stacy to the most impressive single-season rushing performance in team history. The second team All-SEC selection broke team records with 1,136 rushing yards and 13 touchdowns.

Shoop’s Vanderbilt defense played with the same effort as the former nationally ranked units he guided at William & Mary. Shoop’s defensive overhaul of the Commodores resulted in staggering improvement, such as jumping from 93rd in total offense last year to 19th in the NCAA this season.

The offense is averaging 342.8 yards of total offense, the highest average by a Commodore unit in five years. Donovan’s offense surpassed the 2010 Vanderbilt unit in every key statistical category, producing 28.8 more rushing yards and 15.8 additional passing yards. The offense produced 14 more touchdowns than in 2010, ranked among the SEC’s best in explosive plays, and helped the Commodores finish with nearly a three-minute improvement in time of possession.

Donovan’s offense has been a big hit at Vanderbilt, a school that has struggled with point production in recent years. The former Maryland offensive coach accepted the offensive coordinator position when former Terp assistant James Franklin was named Vanderbilt head coach last December.

By limiting foes to a 20.8-point average, the Commodores jumped from 94th in scoring defense to 27th in 2011. The rush defense ranked fourth in the SEC, allowing 70 yards less yards a game than one year ago and holding opposing rushers to just a paltry 3.4-yard average. The unit nabbed 17 interceptions, eight more than the previous season, helping the Commodores to a plus-6 improvement in turnover margin. The defense was especially effective limiting rushing touchdowns (3rd in the SEC with 10 TDs) and first downs (17.8 per game), and getting quarterback sacks (24, 5th in the SEC).

Shoop’s aggressive, attacking defense was paced by a trio of senior All-SEC performers: defensive back Casey Hayward, linebacker Chris Marve, defensive end Tim Fugger. Hayward also earned second team All-America honors from the Walter Camp Foundation, Yahoo! Sports and Rivals.com.

The unit held three BCS-level teams – Ole Miss, Kentucky and Wake Forest – to no more than a touchdown.

The Commdoores’ kickoff returns and net punting ranked among the top five in the SEC. The Commodores were splendid in punt and kickoff coverage. In a midseason conference game against Georgia, a 96-yard kickoff return for a TD and blocked punt nearly provided the Commodores victory over the nationally-ranked Bulldogs.

Bankins’ special teams schemes made fourth downs fun to watch. Vanderbilt converted multiple fakes on fourth down, including a unique punter-to-snapper pass that converted a fourth-and-long situation.

Bankins also mentored a pair of veteran tight ends, Brandon Barden and Austin Monahan. Bankins worked with Barden and Monahan to improve blocking technique. The work helped Zac Stacy set a new team rushing record.

The offense has been extremely consistent, scoring at least 21 points in its last seven outings. Since arriving on campus, Donovan has developed a balanced attack featuring the rushing ability of junior Zac Stacy, and passing game of Jordan Rodgers targeting young receivers Jordan Matthews, Chris Boyd and Jonathan Krause.

Since 1948. It averaged 10 points more this year than in 2010. The unit’s 26.9-point average ranks as Vanderbilt’s highest since Jay Cutler’s senior campaign in 2005. Since midseason, the offense has been extremely consistent, scoring at least 21 points in its last seven outings.

Shoop’s first defense at Vanderbilt enjoyed a remarkable turnaround in 2011, jumping from 93rd in the NCAA to 19th in total defense. The one-year difference was staggering: in 2010, the Commodores ranked 10th or worse among SEC teams in virtually every defensive statistic; this season, Vanderbilt ranked seventh or better in 12 of 13 top defensive stat categories. This year, the ‘Dores defense allowed 10.4 fewer points and 94.6 less yards than in 2010.

COMMODORE COACHES

CHRIS BEATTY
Off. Recruiting Coordinator•WRs
1st year on Vanderbilt staff

Presented with early-season injuries to veteran receivers, Beatty responded by developing relative newcomers into a corps that produced an abundance of big plays.

Sophomore Jordan Matthews and redshirt freshman Chris Boyd made huge strides under Beatty’s guidance, becoming one of the Southeastern Conference’s most productive tandems by the end of the regular season.

After a slow start, Matthews caught fire at midseason. He concluded the season with team highs in receptions (37) and receiving yards (722). Matthews’ final five games were remarkable: 29 catches, 605 receiving yards and four touchdowns. Matthews also concluded the season with a 19.5-yard receiving average, tops among the SEC’s leading wideouts.

Boyd started strong, scoring touchdowns on his first three career receptions. Like Matthews, Boyd enjoyed a solid close to the season, catching 21 passes in his last six games. Boyd topped all SEC freshman with seven touchdown catches.

Two other sophomores, Jonathan Krause and Wesley Tate, also produced for Beatty. As possession receivers, Krause and Tate posted 23 and 19 receptions, respectively.

For Tate, it marked his first year at wide receiver after seeing action and 19 receptions, respectively.

Boyd topped all freshman receivers in the SEC with seven touchdown catches. Jonathan Krause and Wesley Tate both added more than 20 receptions.

More on Beatty

Beatty developed four sophomores into viable aerial targets during the season. Sophomore Jordan Matthews and redshirt freshman Chris Boyd were among the SEC’s top young receivers. Matthews averaged 121 receiving yards over his last five games, and averaging an SEC-leading 19.5 yards per catch. Boyd topped all freshman receivers in the SEC with seven touchdown catches. Jonathan Krause and Wesley Tate both added more than 20 receptions.

WESLEY MCGRIFF
Def. Recruiting Coordinator•DBs
1st year on Vanderbilt staff

McGriff’s collection of defensive backs looked to create turnovers and big plays. They succeeded on both fronts.

Vanderbilt defensive backs contributed 10 interceptions, three returns for touchdowns, seven tackles behind the line of scrimmage and nearly 20 pass breakups.

From the opening game, McGriff’s pupils made game-deciding plays. Junior cornerback Trey Wilson returned picks for touchdowns in wins over Elon and Ole Miss while senior Casey Hayward repeated the trick against Connecticut. It marked the first time in team history that Vanderbilt returned interceptions for touchdowns in three consecutive games.

Hayward finished the season with five interceptions, ranking fourth in the SEC. After the regular season, Hayward earned All-America recognition from several sources, including the Walter Camp Foundation and Rivals.com.

Wilson put together his finest year, finishing with career highs in interceptions (3), passes defended (10) and total tackles (29).

McGriff also received valuable contributions from Andre Hal, Steven Clarke and Eddie Foster among others.

McGriff’s defensive backs started strong and stayed that way for much of the season. His top pupil, senior Casey Hayward, earned All-America recognition after nabbing five interceptions, running his career total to a SEC-high 13. Junior Trey Wilson intercepted three passes, taking two for touchdowns. McGriff’s defensive backs returned three interceptions for scores.

More on Hand

Hand’s coaching job with an underappreciated and inexperienced offensive front didn’t go unnoticed. The Commodores were the only Southeastern Conference team to see three different offensive linemen – center-guards Wesley Johnson, guard-tackles Ryan Seymour and tackle Kyle Fischer – earn the league’s Offensive Lineman of the Week honors.

Herb Hand
Offensive Line
2nd year on Vanderbilt staff

The only coach rehired from the former staff, Hand did a remarkable job molding a undersized offensive line corps.

Hand innovatively dealt with the lack of roster spots along the offensive line. During the summer, Hand made his boldest move, switching three returning starters to new positions. The moves – senior Kyle Fischer from guard to tackle, junior Ryan Seymour from tackle to guard, and sophomore Wesley Johnson from tackle to center – gave Hand the versatility he needed to get the most out of his corps. Throughout the season, Hand’s ability to adapt to key injuries allowed the Commodore offense to gain confidence and produce better results.

The improved line helped Vanderbilt add 28.8 yards to its 2010 rushing average. It also did a better job of protecting the quarterback, allowing 11 fewer sacks.

The three players that switched positions with Hand’s encouragement also were rewarded for making a decision for the good of the entire team. All three enjoyed the distinction of earning SEC Offensive Lineman of the Week honors after an outstanding individual performance.

Like Shoop, Pry accepted James Franklin's offer to move from Football Championship Subdivision (FCS) power Georgia Southern to join the Commodore defensive staff. And like Shoop, Pry made the most of the opportunity.

Charged with coaching a linebacking corps of inexperienced prospects surrounding multiple All-Southeastern Conference pick Chris Marve, Pry molded the group into an efficient and effective unit. The linebackers were vital to the Commodores' improvement in virtually every statistical category. The defense soared in SEC and NCAA rankings, finishing the regular season 19th in total defense, 27th in scoring defense, and 27th in rush defense.

Pry's pupils stepped forward from the season opener. Marve earned All-SEC honors for the third straight year after leading the squad with 84 tackles. Tristan Strong, Chase Garnham and Archibald Barnes made immediate impacts when inserted into the starting lineup.

Aside from two-year captain Chris Marve returning at middle linebacker, Pry mentored three inexperienced prospects into productive roles as starting linebackers.

Rahne worked with two quarterbacks during the season, Larry Smith and Jordan Rodgers, and directed the development of a trio of true freshman prospects. Both Smith and Rodgers had success under Rahne. Smith increased his completion percentage to a career high under Rahne (57.7%) and provided excellent leadership throughout the season. When called upon at midseason, Rodgers responded and never relinquished the job.

Rahne's season that included 6.5 quarterback sacks and 12.5 tackles for loss was rewarded when coaches picked him as a second team All-SEC recipient. Lohr didn't earn All-SEC, but his totals in tackles for loss (11.5) and quarterback sacks (4.5) ranked high among tackles in the conference.

Spencer also mentored several others to solid seasons, including ends Johnell Thomas and Walker May, and tackles Colt Nichter, T.J. Greenstone and Jared Morse.

Vanderbilt student-athletes flourished under the new strength and conditioning program installed by Director of Performance Enhancement Dwight Galt. Working with Galt and assistants Barry Brown and Chuck Losey, Commodore players enthusiastically embraced the year-around program aimed at improving speed, agility, strength and power.

The in-season training program, aimed at maximizing results in November, was extremely successful in its initial season. From early August to mid-November, each player averaged a bench press increase of 13.4 pounds. Each student-athlete also averaged a 1.1-pound weight gain during the regular season.
